

Lipreading

Lipreading for the Hard of Hearing and their Families and Friends

The ability to communicate is one of our most profound and valuable gifts. We communicate by hearing, speaking, seeing, touching and in other ways that are important to us. Communication is essential if we are to be truly human. Hearing, which is something that we depend on in our daily living, sometimes begins to fade whether we are young or old. A hearing loss may occur slowly or very suddenly.

One helpful skill to deal with hearing loss is lipreading. The best time to learn to lip-read is when you still retain some hearing. The main objective of lipreading is to help you to understand the main ideas in a conversation. No fee. Student Body Card: $2. Instructor: Lois Frand, Communications Specialist
